

The Quiet American Gardener

Welcome to Hidcote, an inspirational arts and crafts garden that's been gradually returned to its 1930s heyday.

Would you give your garden to the National Trust? That's what the American horticulturalist Lawrence Johnston did in 1948.

Explore his garden of 'rooms' and feel as though you are strolling around his private grounds. He carefully designed each room to have its own special atmosphere.

Don't miss my favourite Hidcote moment:

When I spot the fresh lime leaves of Alchemilla mollis, unfurling in Mrs Winthrop's Garden, I know that this is just the beginning of an explosion of contrasting colours of cool blues and bright yellows that will last for months and months.

Jane Ewers
Plant Sales Manager

Exploring

- | | |
|----------------------------|----------------------------------|
| 1 The Courtyard | 16 The Central Stream Garden |
| 2 The Old Garden | 17 The Wilderness |
| 3 The White Garden | 18 The Long Walk |
| 4 The Maple Garden | 19 The Lower Stream Garden |
| 5 The Circle | 20 The Bulb Slope |
| 6 The Red Border | 21 The Rock Bank |
| 7 The Stilt Garden | 22 The Pillar Garden |
| 8 The Alpine Terrace | 23 The Theatre Lawn |
| 9 The Winter Border | 24 The Pine Garden and Lily pool |
| 10 Mrs. Winthrop's Garden | 25 The Plant House |
| 11 The Fuchsia Garden | 26 The Rose Walk |
| 12 The Bathing Pool Garden | 27 Kitchen Garden |
| 13 The Poppy Garden | 28 The Garden Yard |
| 14 The Upper Stream Garden | 29 The Beech Alley |
| 15 Hydrangea Corner | 30 Tennis Court |

Want to know more...?

More information about Lawrence Johnston and the garden can be found in our colour short guide, souvenir guidebook or DVD.